At the recent sale referred to, it brought over $5,000. The second was sold, if we are not mistaken, less than three years ago, for $7,000; and at the recent sale, we understand, about half of it was sold for about the sum it all sold for then. A third tract, of about 500 acres of pine land, was valued about 4 years ago at $3,000, which the owner could now realize $10 per acre for. What say the land owners along the line of the Railroad to these facts? Can they longer doubt the deep interest they have in the success of the project? Will they longer besitate to promote that interest, by withholding a liberal subscription to the stock of the company?
